THE LEE STATUE

THE INFANTRY ARE MAKING PREPARATIONS TO GO
DRAWN BY PATRIOTIC THROGS

The Roanoke Light Infantry are rapidly making the necessary preparations for their trip to Richmond, where they will participate in the ceremonies incident to the unveiling of the Lee statue.

With new uniforms, which will soon be ready, new guns now on their way and a good deal of cash in their inside pockets, the boys expect to have a most enjoyable trip. They will be drilled regularly for some time before they leave for Richmond and confidently expect to make the finest appearance of any troops present.

There is a rumor to the effect that the Lee statue will be unveiled by the Lynchburg company and the Infantry will join forces and go together, but it cannot be authenticated. If they decide on this, the corps will be bound to carry off the honors of the day. The statue is now in Richmond and a correspondent thus writes of its arrival:

Richmond never witnessed or participated in such a scene as the ceremony incident to the removal of the statue containing the equestrian statue of Gen. Robert E. Lee from the railway station to Allen park, where the statue is to be erected. Shortly after 5 o'clock Wednesday evening the procession was formed with a squad of policemen in front, followed by Chief Marshal Thomas A. Branner, and assistants, mounted. Then came the Lee Camp of Confederate Veterans, under whose auspices the removal was made, followed by the old veterans' organizations. Immediately behind them came the four trucks in single file, with men, women and children tugging at the ropes. The route of the procession, which was about one and a half miles in length, was down Broad street to First, through First to Franklin, out Franklin to the point of destination. The line of march was literally packed with people from starting point to finish, while the cheering and waving of flags was continuous.

Here and there groups of people would drop out of the line and a rush would be made to fill their places. The boys and some of the girls, however, kept their places on the ropes to the end. At Monroe Park, which was the best vantage ground along the route of the procession, the ropes were so crowded with people that they were constantly treading on each other's heels. As they passed the park there were five hundred grown ladies and girls whose fair hands held the ropes. Little tots were carried out into the streets in their mothers' arms and their small hands were pressed against the ropes. When the destination was reached there was a scramble by relic hunters for the ropes with which the trucks had been drawn, and despite the efforts of the police they succeeded in cutting them all to pieces. But for the old veterans the boxes containing the statue would have shared the same fate. All the trucks were handsomely decorated with pictures of General Lee and flags of the Southern States, while here and there a Confederate battle flag floated in the breeze.

AN UNGALLANT HORSE.

He Throws His Mistress to the Road and She Has a Severe Shock.

Miss Louise Chapman met with a painful, but not very serious accident, yesterday afternoon.

Accompanied by a lady friend, she went out for a horseback ride. The two ladies rode down Jefferson into Campbell and then crossed the railroad, going up the steep incline past the Roanoke Rolling Mill.

Just at this point a horse does not run from the yard of a house in the vicinity and jumping up at the heels of the horse, barked furiously. The animals became frightened and started off on a run. Miss Chapman's horse reared and she was a fine horsewoman, she was unseated and fell heavily to the ground.

A buggy in which was seated Captain J. H. Winkate and Mr. J. F. Christian chanced to pass just at this time and the gentlemen hastened to the young ladies assistance. She was assisted in the vehicle and carried to her home. Dr. St. John was called in. He said that Miss Chapman was not badly hurt, but was much shaken up by her fall.

They Look Before Leaping.

At no time in the history of Virginia, says the New York Times, has there been such promise of the investment of an immense amount of foreign and other outside capital in developing the State's mineral resources as now. An English syndicate is at this moment sending geologists to examine certain mineral properties in southwestern Virginia for the purpose of which they have secured an option with a view to the investment of $1,400,000, should the report of the experts be favorable.

True Words From John.

"To discontinue an advertisement," says John Wamaker, "is like taking down your sign. If you want to do business you must let the public know it. Standing advertisements are better and cheaper than reading notices. They look more substantial and inspire confidence. I would as soon think of doing business without clerks as without advertising."

The Removal of Mr. J. D. Hobble to Memphis, Tenn., will in no way interfere with the business of the Hobble Music Co., Lynchburg, as it will be continued under the management of Mr. D. B. Horner, and with the cooperation of assistants. This old established firm's liberal dealing.

Mr. Fred Julian, of Emporium, Pa., is in the city.

ABOUT THE HOTELS.

It is seldom that Roanoke has so distinguished a visitor as Admiral Franklin. We have plenty of capitalist financiers and promoters, but not often a great soldier or sailor. Admiral Franklin is at the Hotel Roanoke. He is a tall, distinguished looking man, and he has interests in the Norfolk and Western. One of these days he will perhaps be the head of the United States navy, for he is in the direct line of promotion and is one of its most popular and valuable officers. He lives in the fashionable West End of Washington, when he is not "sailing the bright blue sea" and his family are prominent in social circles. Of course, the Admiral likes the Southwest and thinks it has a great future before it. Every body seems to be agreed upon that.

John Hoyt is the name of a young man with bright blue eyes and a blond mustache. As his eyes are not the only bright thing about him, he is perhaps the youngest manager of a theatre in Virginia or the South, having charge of the opera house of Danville, one of the best appointed places of amusement in the State. He is fully abreast of the times and is looking at the Southwest section for outside parties who are thinking of investing.

Col. Thomas Smith the son of "Extra Billy" Smith, the famous, one time Governor of Virginia is here, stopping at Marshall's Cafe. He is a tall, well proportioned man, and during the war he was a regiment adjutant with Jackson, and down the Valley. Several years ago Colonel Smith became the subject of much newspaper notoriety by his duel with Editor Elam of the Richmond White. He shot his man in the jaw, inflicting a painful but not serious wound. Colonel Smith was, under President Cleveland, a United States Judge in New Mexico. He has a brown beard slightly sprinkled with gray, and wears a silk hat.

A Virginia gentleman of the old school is William A. Glasgow, who was in the city a couple of days ago. He now lives in Lexington, which fact he has represented in the Virginia Senate. He lived at one time near Roanoke and knew the place when it was nothing more than a meadow, and cattle browsed where busy Salem avenue now is. Mr. Glasgow spent the day in walking about the city with his friend Mr. Callahan. "I can hardly grasp the fact that this city stands on the spot where I once hunted ducks," he said. "It seems like a dream to me and every moment I think that I will wake up to find the woods and meadows here again. The story of Roanoke, when it is written, will read like a romance. Words fail to do justice to the scene. The numerous strides it has made one should be familiar with what it was a dozen years ago."

They are Growing Together.

At a meeting of the Inter Urban Land Company held at the office of Messrs. L. L. Powell & Co. on Wednesday, W. A. Carpenter, esq., of Salisbury, was elected president and general manager.

Mr. Hon. J. W. Daniel who tendered his resignation.

Messrs. R. E. Scott and C. A. Huffman were elected directors to fill the vacancies occurred by the resignation of Messrs. R. Stockton Terry and W. A. Carpenter.

The company will have its office in the room now occupied by the National Exchange Bank, and it is proposed to develop at once the property lying between the old town and Masons Creek, embracing 775 acres of the finest lands between Roanoke and Salem.

The contract for laying off and mapping the property was awarded to Messrs. Winkate & Hancok, who will begin work at once.

Three Dollars and Costs.

The Smiths and Jones were on the wagon yesterday at the fair. The Smiths got into a row with K. Bernani in front of the market house, and J. B. Jones, a friend, went to the assistance. The tangle took a hand at the police court and fined the parties $3 each and costs. In the afternoon Smith and Jones became involved in a difficulty with the two who appeared before them in the morning. Without any preliminaries the attacked party proceeded to "do 'em up," to use the language of the street. An extra session of the police court held at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, the boys, who pleaded guilty and the voice of Acting Mayor Evans ran out in stentorian tones: "Three dollars and costs. Next case."

A Golden Opportunity.

All remember the old saying: "If the mountain will not come to Mahomet, Mahomet will go to the mountain. Your attention is called to a reversed order of affairs. All Roanoke country go to Washington, but Mr. A. C. Moses of the firm of W. D. Moses & Sons, of Washington, D. C., the largest retail furniture, carpet, drapery and wall paper house in the city, has brought a royal line of samples right to the Housekeepers of this city, who will have the genuine pleasure of selecting just the goods they want at prices that will surprise the brightest and closest of bargain hunters. The samples are on the second floor of Rosenbaum Bros' establishment, No. 42 Salem avenue, during this week only. my3-2t.

The Lynchburg Primary.

The primary election yesterday in Lynchburg was closely contested and it will require an official count before the result can be made known. Up to the time the telegraph office closed last night the count had not been concluded.

Miss Sallie Keeny, of Rocky Mount, is visiting friends in the city.

FROM THE TOUR

THE DIRECTORS AND STOCK-HOLDERS COME BACK
RUMORED PURCHASE OF RAILS

The directors and stockholders of the Norfolk and Western railroad will arrive in the city from their tour of inspection over the Western division of the road at 7:15 o'clock this afternoon.

After leaving here they stopped over in Salem a few hours and then went on to Radford where some time was spent in driving about the promising little place. They then continued their trip. Later in the evening they went on to Bluefield, up the New River division, and stopped at the inn.

Yesterday the party went to Portsmouth and spent some time in inspecting the mines about that place. They may go to Bristol before returning here, but had not been decided upon before they left on the trip.

The gentlemen will take a rest when they get back here and will then continue the inspection, taking a look at the Eastern division to the terminus of the road at Norfolk.

It is said that during the session here a resolution was passed authorizing a consolidation with the Radford and Little River railroad, the building of a branch road from Norfolk to Portsmouth and a line from Petersburg to Richmond, thence on to Washington. This, however, is given only as a rumor in the absence of all the leading officials from the city cannot be authenticated.

A NOTED CRACKSMAN

Passed Through Roanoke En Route to Baltimore and the Courts.

One of the most desperate criminals known to the police of the country ate supper in Roanoke on Wednesday evening.

His name is William Sterlings, and for twenty-three years he has been a cracksmen. He doesn't look like one, however. His face is pleasant, with a pair of black eyes set deep in their sockets. He had on a pair of hand cuffs and was in charge of Detective Knox, of Baltimore, who captured him in Kentucky on Monday after a desperate encounter.

He is wanted now for burglary but this is not by far the worst charge that is against him. He admitted to a reporter that he had killed three men during his life of crime, but emphatically denied the reports that he had made away with eleven. The three men were killed in self defence, he claims.

The detective and the burglar are by this time safe in Baltimore where the cracksmen will be put on trial.

THE STAMPTON SMASH-UP

The Damages at Lost Assorted and Paid the Pekin Company.

A telegram from Baltimore says: Rice and Harrison and the "Pearl of Pekin" company have effected an agreement with the Chesapeake and Ohio railway company for the damages sustained on account of the wreck in Virginia. The auditor of the company had a consultation with Louis Harrison's lawyer, and the terms of the settlement were agreed upon.

The result was the payment to each member of the company three weeks' salary besides the amounts already paid for personal injuries. The opera company asserted that their season was to last six weeks longer. Messrs. Rice and Harrison are supposed to have received a handsome sum for the loss of their profits. The share of Mr. P. Harris, of the Academy of Music, was $1,200. The members of the company who remained here pending the settlement, have left for their homes.

UNCLAIMED PACKAGE SALE.

A lively time at the Annual Sale of Unclaimed Packages.

The annual sale of unclaimed packages left in the express office of Roanoke took place at the warehouses of G. L. Stevens yesterday afternoon.

It was an unusual and unique collection scattered about the room and the bidding, from the large crowd in attendance, was very spirited. Much fun was indulged in by the bidders. The real estate men present for a number of syndicates and purchased a large lot of the packages with a view to profit. For the most part the packages were of little or no value, catalogues, old clothing and patent medicine predominating.

AN ELEGANT TRIBUTE.

From the Foreman of the Paint Department to one of His Men.

MR. JERRE GLASS.—In June 22, 1886 you came to Roanoke Machine Works and enrolled yourself with Mr. Right, of artists, since which time you have been recognized as a color bearer. In all this warfare you have adorned our profession with rainbow tints, giving to life's romance every color in the vocabulary, oiling our canvases with pure linseed, boiled and raw, brightening our prospects with a liberal supply of varnish, advancing with you from a. b. c. to the higher schools of science.

In every brush your colors have been leading on to victory:

"Till every wound was put to rest
And every knife laid by,
The blood that ran in to stock room
And the coating left to dry.

As your commander I have had the most implicit confidence in your ability and integrity.
